This year has been one of growth and progress for the Maricopa County Superior Court bench. By the end of the year, the Court will have seen the creation of 3 new judicial divisions and the appointment of 14 new judges and commissioners to fill these new positions and vacancies occurring throughout the year. Two more vacancies are pending appointment of judges to replace judges retiring at year’s end. While change is constant, the quality of our bench remains excellent, primarily due to the merit selection process utilized for both judges and commissioner appointments. One of the true pleasures of my job is to meet with and welcome new judges and commissioners to the Court immediately after their appointment. In every circumstance, I have been impressed with the wisdom of selecting judges and commissioners through a process designed to identify qualities and characteristics necessary for judicial impartiality and excellence.

Since the current merit selection process was adopted by Arizona voters 40 years ago, Maricopa County Superior Court has become one of the best, if not the preeminent, trial courts in the country primarily because of a bench that honors the rule of law, values fair and impartial justice, and constantly seeks innovation and efficiency in judicial process. Merit selection encourages these values, and avoids allegiance to political considerations, campaign contributors, or campaign promises that are so prevalent in other states that continue to select judges through a campaign and election process. In Maricopa County we can be justifiably proud that a merit selection process continues to produce men and women of excellence, achievement, and strong character to the bench.

Building on the strength of the merit selection process for judges, the Maricopa County Superior Court has mirrored that process for the appointment of Court Commissioners. Commissioner applicants complete an extensive application similar to judge applications, and are then thoroughly interviewed and vetted by the Superior Court Commissioner Nominating Committee before their final selection by the Presiding Judge. The strength of this process is validated by the fact that during the last 5 years, 48% of all vacant judgeships on the Maricopa County Superior Court have been filled by Court Commissioners all selected in this manner.

Trial courts in the United States are traditionally configured within county boundaries. Many people are surprised to learn that the Maricopa County Superior Court is the fourth largest trial court in the country based upon county population (3.8 million based on 2010 U.S. Census). Other large urban areas are larger than the Phoenix metropolitan area, but many have a number of smaller trial courts within multiple counties that comprise the metropolitan area. In Arizona 60% of the state’s population resides in Maricopa County. With the recent creation of three additional judgeships, we will have 98 Judges and 59 Commissioners, allocated into five major departments as follows:

If you have not already done so, I would encourage you to review the Court’s recently published Annual Report, that highlights some interesting demographics and statistical information including some numbers that may remind you how many people that each of you impact every day in your work. For example, last fiscal year: 1,374,941 persons were screened through security into court buildings; 601,448 were summoned to be jurors in Maricopa County; an average of 2,853 hearings and 2,334 motions and events were heard or processed each day; and there were 29,704 adults on probation and 2,405 juveniles on probation.

This size allows our Court to combine resources and achieve many economies of scale such as development of in-house technical resources, better community access to legal services at regional centers, efficient judicial, administrative and probation programs, and departmental judicial assignments and efficiencies. Paraphrasing a recent consult that studied our system, we have been able to become remarkably more efficient by using our size and innovative spirit to leverage the growing demand for legal services in our community.

Over the years we have utilized technology at an ever-increasing rate to increase the efficiency of and access to legal services, organized judicial divisions into departments for increased efficiency, reduced the need and cost for many more judicial divisions by creating more commissioner courts with dedicated caseloads, greatly leveraged the ability of each judicial officer to handle many more cases by adopting processes and procedures to resolve disputes through arbitration, mediation, open negotiation, and settlement conferences, and have enlisted volunteers from the community to leverage the ability of the Court to broaden and improve the delivery of court services including: Court-Appointed Special Advocates (CASA) Program for juvenile dependency cases; the Guardian Review program for probate guardianship cases; Teen Court, Girl Scouts (Detention Troop), and Community Justice Panel programs of the Juvenile Probation Department; and programs in the Education Services and Restorative Justice Services of the Adult Probation Department. These and many other innovations have allowed our Court to adapt to increased growth and demand for court services, to continue operating at a high level during periods of financial crisis, and keep pace with our rapidly changing world and community expectations for legal services.

Despite the many innovations our Court has implemented over the years, the key strength of our Court remains the versatility, broad knowledge, and work ethic of our judicial officers, judicial assistants, bailiffs, administrative support personnel, and probation employees. One aspect of improving our versatility and knowledge base is our system that encourages rotation of work assignments. Each year in November the Presiding Judge invites judicial officers to submit their preferences for department and location assignments. These requests and the needs of the Court are carefully considered before final rotational assignments are announced in January to give sufficient time for calendar adjustments before the assignments become effective July 1. On occasion, vacancies and the needs of the Court require “mid-term” rotations to occur.

I am continually gratified by the response to rotations, innovation, and other changes by all of our judicial officers and Court personnel. Our Court takes pride in being not only a Court of excellence, but in striving to be the very best we can be. I am sincerely grateful to our 1,195 Superior Court personnel, 1,091 Adult Probation officers and employees, and 604 Juvenile Probation officers and employees, for the work each of you do every day to maintain the high standards of excellence expected by the Court, and more importantly, by each of you individually.

Seasons Greetings
The Adult Probation Department (APD) celebrated the 19th Annual Turkey Feast on November 20 at the Garfield Probation Center. The celebration brings together the local community, law enforcement and the Judicial Branch for a holiday meal and an opportunity to mingle. Even Santa Claus took a break from his busy work at the North Pole to meet and greet the children at this gathering.

This year, a record 850 plates of turkey, mashed potatoes and corn were served to hungry guests. Volunteers served up pumpkin pie and chocolate cupcakes, baked and iced by Probation Supervisor Tammy Allen, for dessert. Many thanks to the 73 APD and Court staff members who volunteered to serve guests, bus tables and assist Santa distribute toys to more than 300 lucky children. Also, special thanks to the army of volunteers and organizations who made the Garfield Turkey Feast a memorable event.

Act of Kindness Returns 50-year-old Memories to Local Bricklayer

Submitted by Brenda Yanez, a spokeswoman for Torres Consulting and Law Group in Tempe.

Deep in the airshafts of the Maricopa County court building lay the answer to a 50-year-old question. A question that may never have been answered if not for a recent discovery.

Dennis Cahill, who comes from a long line of bricklayers, recently learned what happened to his missing wallet – a wallet that vanished while he was working on the Maricopa County east court building in 1963.

Cahill recalls finishing his shift and realizing he lost his wallet.

“I thought I lost it in a porta-potty,” says the retired Local 3 bricklayer. “I only had one dollar in the wallet.”

And while one dollar could buy Cahill a small dinner at the time, he opted not to conduct the messy porta-potty search.

More than 50 years later, a Caliente Construction worker tasked with helping renovate the Maricopa County east court building sees something in the same airshaft Cahill had been in the day his wallet disappeared.

The worker while removing asbestos and lead paint from the 5-foot deep, 30-foot wide and 180-foot high airshaft finds the lost wallet – totally intact. He promptly returned it to his superintendent.

Caliente Construction Superintendent James Williams has worked in construction his entire life, and he hadn’t seen something like this come up.

“I was compelled to return the wallet to its rightful owner or family member. I think I would want someone to do the same if it was my father that had lost this,” says Williams.

Williams says he spent a couple of hours Googling Cahill’s name until he came up with a family member who he called right away. That family member put Williams in touch with Cahill’s son.

“I played cloak and dagger with the son until he was sure I actually had his father’s property and I was sure that he was really the son,” says Williams.

The wallet contains all the items Cahill was carrying with him that day on the job in 1963. He had a draft card, driver’s license, Social Security card, a bricklayers skill card, a picture of his former wife and infant son, and the infamous dollar bill – now worth about four dollars since it’s a collector’s item.

“Mr. Williams went through an incredible amount of effort to find me, and that says a lot about who he is as a person. One heck of a nice guy,” says Cahill.

Cahill now resides in Bear Flat a community about 20 miles from Payson. He says he’s going strong with life and is happy in his retirement because of his good union pension.

“I love socializing at the retirement home close to where I live. I’m really getting into this game called Mahjon,” says Cahill. Cahill proudly says that his support for his union is still strong.

His son, Jim Cahill, currently is the President of Bricklayers Local 3.

“I’ve been a contractor, member of the Tempe City Council, ran for Tempe mayor. I even have a senior center in Tempe named after me,” says Cahill.

“But I’ve always considered myself a bricklayer – and to this day I’m proud to say I’m a member of Bricklayers Local 3,” he says.
